Sam Griesemer is the John McDonnell Scholar. He is a sophomore from Joplin, Missouri and majoring in computer science and mathematics. A lifelong love of math and a deep curiosity for the human brain led to his interest in machine learning. Sam aspires to attend graduate school and conduct research in deep learning techniques. He is a member of the Association for Computing Machinery chapter on campus. Last year, he was part of the student team that won the “Best Nutritional Product” award at the ArchHacks hackathon.
